THANKSGIVING DAY.

Governor Hartranft has issued his Thaksgiving proclamation fixing the same day as the President—Thursday, November 26th. For conciseness, brevity, and to the point, the Governor's proclamation is a model State paper. Every year since the war the annual Thanksgiving festival grows more widely observed. Established by the stern old Puritan fathers when they first settled upon the fobidding shores of New England, it has become now a National festival. Even those people who only celebrate the day by eating a big dinner are better for Thanksgiving day, and one of the most pleasing features of the holiday is that it is growing to be a sort of reunion when the boys and girls who have wandered away from the old home return for the day and gladden the hearts of their parents and each other.

THE COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Court convened last Monday. It was rumored on the street the week before court met that an effort would be made to quash proceedings by proving some irregularity in the drawing of the jury and on account of the fact that the court proclamation was not published according to law. This move was said by dame rumor to be started in the interest of the liquor men, but of this our readers can judge. Here are the facts up to time of going to press, and we will give full particulars next week:

Commonwealth vs. Thomas Loughrey, Yocum & Alexander counsel for defendent. Motion to quash indictment and challenge to array of Grand Jury at Aug. term and to the Petit jury at November term. Allegations: Grand Jury at Aug. term not legally constituted. Order fixing time of holding court not made at proper term. No publication as required by law. Venire Facias not properly directed nor sealed with proper seal; and Jury wheel not properly fitted nor sealed and secured as directed by law.

STATE ITEMS.

—The Williamsport Register has been resuscitated.

—John Klee fell dead at the depot at Scranton on Saturday, while running to catch a train. He was an aged man.

—Eight hours a day for five days and no work on Saturday, now constitute a week's work at the shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in Harrisburg.

—Micheal Kearney, aged forty-five years, was found lying at the foot of a steep enbankment in Scranton on Sunday morning, insensible, and covered with cuts and bruises. He was removed to a hospital, where he died in a few minutes. It is thought probable that he was murdered, and that the murderers threw him over the embankment to hide their crime.

—The Scranton Republican of the 16th inst. says: Saturday morning a German named Long, residing at Petersburg, evinced symptoms peculiar to hydrophobia, such as shrinking from the sight of water, etc. His friends called in Drs Gumpert, of this city, and Windters, of Dunmore, who, upon examination, pronounced the case one of confirmed hydrophobia. Yesterday all the symptoms set in strongly, and Long was attacked with convulsions of the severest kind. The doctors attending say that under the circumstances he cannot live longer than forty-eight hours. How the seeds of this terrible malady were sown is a mystery, and can only be accounted for on the grounds that Long, in playing with a favorite dog, permitted the animal to lick a slight wound upon his hand. The unfortunate man is twenty-eight years of age, and his recovery is an impossibility.

The stories in the number are, many of them, remarkably good. The wonderful of adventures of "Tchumpin" are concluded; Mary N Prescott writes charmingly about "Prue's Dolls;" there is a bright, fanciful story by B. E. Wolf, called "Mabel's troubles," with a picture by Eytinge, a characteristic tale translated from the Swedish by Selma Borg and Maria A. Brown. Helen C. Weeks tell about "Fourteen Monkeys," and all the boys will be glad to read "The Comanches' Trial," by Samuel W. Cozzens. A poem, which is excellent in itself, is illustrated by twelve dogs' heads drawn from life with great spirit and fidelity by A. H. Thayer. Among the other poems are "Little Whimpy," by Mrs. Dodge; "The Jeweled Tree," by A. M. Machar, and "Friends," by L. G. Warner. Mrs. Abby Morton Diaz has one of her funny sketches called "A Little Girl's Story." Very interesting announcements are made for the January issue of the St. Nicholas, which will be the Holiday number, and will contain, besides ever so many Christmas stories, the opening chapters of the new serials: "The Young Surveyer," by J. T. Trowbridge, and "Eight Cousins," by Louisa M. Alcott.

MONEY.

Our subscribers can bear witness that for the two years that we have had control of the REPUBLICAN we have not, through its columns, asked them for money. We do not like to do it now, but the stern mandate of necessity compels us to it. The first of the year is coming, when we shall want to settle with those who have favored us by allowing us to run bills with them—bills which we shall be unable to pay unless our subscribers and others who are indebted to us pay what they owe us. We have on our books the names of eight hundred good men who have never paid us a dollar since we came to Bellefonte. These men owe us four dollars apiece, a small matter to each one individually, but an important matter to us, amounting to the large sum of thirty-two hundred dollars ($3,200.) With this sum we could pay all our liabilities, put a new dress upon our paper, and make many other improvements which would please our subscribers and give them more for their money. Every business man will see by the above statement, that unless we should strictly enforce our delinquent rates we should be defrauded every year out of quite a nice little sum in the matter of interest. And then another fact here presents itself which renders this negligence on the part of this portion of our patrons very anoying. We have in the past year been obliged from time to time to borrow small sums, so small that we are ashamed to state the amount, in order to meet little claims against ourselves, and for which accommodation the bank charges us the ruinous discount of twelve per cent. Were we compelled to borrow much at this rate our business could not stand it, and no legitimate business can afford to pay any such rates of interest, either on large or small amounts.

Now with enough on our books, and against good men, to pay all claims against us five times over, we cannot longer continue this kind of business, and must insist upon a settlement of these little bills. If any of our patrons are unable to pay at once, and will tell us so, we will try to make some arrangement with them; but if they do not communicate with us we shall conclude that they are able to pay, but are disposed to impose upon us, and shall govern ourselves accordingly.

We are having postal cards printed upon which we can insert the amount due us, and these will be sent out some time in the latter part of December. We should much rather however that our subscribers would send the money at once and save us the trouble of sending out the cards. Money can be sent to us in registered letters at our risk, but remember, if we are to assume the risk of the mails the letters must be registered.

To our subscribers outside of the county we have this to say: That after the new postal law goes into operation, which is Jan. 1st, 1875, we shall stop all papers not paid for in advance, and send all bills to an attorney for collection. To our patrons everywhere we say, our ambition is to put out the very best paper in central Pennsylvania, and we will do it if our subscribers will pay up. But it is a terrible drawback to have to carry a lot of dead heads year after year, and we have decided that we cannot and will not do it any longer. If there are any that do not wish to pay for their paper we do not want their names upon our books. They are only an expense to us, and a man that will not pay for his county paper will be a poor customer to our advertisers. In conclusion, we would say, that we are thankful for the generous patronage which we have received during the past year. We have had more than an equal share of job work, which, as far as we know, has given perfect satisfaction. We have also had large accessions to our subscription list. Now, if we can clear out the "dead beats" we shall have the best list in the state. Come down with the stamps.

——Now boys, be hunting up your old skates, and prepare for the moonlight evenings.

WINTER IS UPON US—WHAT MUST THE POOR DO TO BE SAVED?

All our readers no doubt, have heard the saying, "Winter lingers in the lap of Spring." Well, fortunately for those who are poor, with thin clothes and no work, and very little bread, fall is lingering in the lap of winter, and as we write, on this 23d day of November, 1874, a thunder storm is in progress, and peal on peal is heard, as though a company of artillery men were busy at work in the mysterious canopy above.

It is rare indeed, that we have so protracted a period of the delightful tempered mildness of autumn supervening the chilling blasts of advancing winter. Yet the monitions of change are fast upon us, and with the rigors of winter, much trial and suffering is to come. The question sadly presses itself upon our sympathies, how is want to be satisfied during the long and weary hibernation of frost and snows? Labor is inert, employment the exception. Hands that would, cannot gain the wages of industry. At no time in our generation has there been such heavy resource of all classes of rude and skilled labor standing idle in the market place. In all branches of production and manufacture there is a torpor, which seems almost deathly in suspended vitality and collapse. Nor are the signs propitious for an immediate revival. We have yet to struggle and yet to hope. There is a peculiarity in our situation not often, if ever before, seen in our material condition—a lack of faith in values, an absolute destruction of confidence. There is an aversion to all active enterprise, a repugnance to the employment or uses of capital. But this very day we have heard more complaint of hard times than we have heard before since the panic commenced. There seems to be no one at ease and satisfied except the money lenders, those vultures of society who always fatten on universal ruin. True, the bank vault is full to repletion; the private coffer has its hoarded stores, but what doth it avail the poor? There is many a man who has saved a small sum to make a payment on his little property, who will this winter be actually "skinned alive" by those who will take advantage of his necessities. And where is the remedy? There is not a leading interest in any department which is not breathed upon by a blight. The shuttle and the loom move sluggishly in the slack demand and reduced profit, while the cinders of the furnace are cold and ashes of the forge are smouldering. To the wealth which owns, the loss and shrinkage is of ruin, if continued; but to the idle muscles which have neither earning or bread, the calamity is appalling. It is not only in cities that haggard want is impending, but there are thousands in the lesser communities, down to the smallest of hamlets, who are to languish under the same terrible distress.

There are no broken vistas of advantage to lighten the darkness of our despondency. The full yields of our fields comes in upon falling markets. With favorable conditions of foreign demand, there is no vivacity or elasticity in our exports. The gambling of the stock exchange is now the legitimate system of the corn and cotton exchanges. Purchase and instant delivery are never, or rarely, the manner of traffic. It is a present price fixed for a future transfer, with all the fever and delirium of the gaming table or the betting pool. The condition of markets has no influence upon supply and demand under these manipulations of rival operators for a rise or a fall.

So far as political action can give relief by any legislation upon the currency there is little to be hoped for from that quarter. In the late elections we see the triumph of the free trade and hard money party. That principle carried out means no work, hard times, and falling prices for everything the farmer has to sell. To the President we can look as almost the direct cause of our financial trouble, and his views are more in accord with the views of the new Congress than the old. In the late election the people seem to have looked at the President, and to have forgotten in their desire for change, that he was not the Republican party. They have sold out cheap; they have extended an earnest invitation to the panic to tarry a while longer with us.

The lesson to be taught to those upon whom these ills will press in slender attire and spare meals, subjection to disease and the wear and waste of daily and hourly want, are fortitude to submit and courage to endure. The native energy of the people has recuperation in it, if we will leave it to its own work. Public and private charity will do much. Frugality and abstemiousness of life are aids to the indigent and impoverished. Labor need not give away to utter despair. The harvest has been rich in the lusty ear and golden sheaf. And now as the slanting sunshine measures the nearing of the inhospitable season, let us brace the nerves and summon endurance for whatever there may be of poverty and privation. Among those richly endowed in gifts of plenty there should be that free giving which brightens the lot of those upon whom adversity lays its heavy hand.

SENTENCE OF GEORGE W. DAICY.

In the United States District Court, on Saturday, Judge McCandless, on motion of District Attorney Reed, passed sentence upon George. W. Daicy, Postmaster at Phillipsburg, Centre county, who had plead guilty to embezzling the funds of the office. Mr. Reed stated to the Court that Mr. Daicy had served as a soldier during the war of the rebellion, and had lost a leg in the struggle for the maintainance of the integrity of the Union, and whilst the offense would justify a severe sentence, he asked the Court, in view of his patriotic services to the country, and the good character given him by his friends in Clearfield, that the sentence be as light as possible under the circumstances. The Court then sentenced the defendant to two years imprisonment in the penitentiary—a comparatively light punishment.

A FEW OF THE WANTS OF THE DAY.

To the Editor of the Pittsburgh Commercial:

500,000 men wanted, and a head for the Democratic monster:—

A head with eye that cannot see, with ears that cannot hear, and with brains that cannot think of what the American people want—one that can balance itself for four years on a platform of three planks: Hard Cash, Free Trade and Poverty. Then we will want—

20,000 men to build workhouses to shelter paupers;

10,000 keepers of the poor with good salaries, to starve those paupers to death on the slow-but-sure English plan;

10,000 extra sheriffs, to sell at auction all the property of the middle classes for the mortgages and taxes:

60,000 men to collect taxes enough at the point of the bayonet to pay the interest in the National Debt to the bondholders;

100,000 able-bodied policemen to keep down bread riots in the large centres of population; and 300,000 men for a standing army to keep the rest of the people from getting discontented.

Then we want all the mechanics and skilled laborers of the country to take up the spade and the hoe to work on the prairies, raising corn and hogs on the shares for railroad corporations, grain speculators and transatlantic steamship companies, all of whom will be employed in transporting cheap "grub" to the monarchial governments of Europe for half the male population they have now under arms, protecting their divine right to rule with an iron rod.

Apply to August Belmont, or at Tammany Hall, New York.

All newspapers in favor of steady employment for the working classes, please copy.

Hurrah for Hard Cash, Free Trade, and bully times doing nothing.

—The Sheriff and County Commissioners of our neighboring county of Clearfield have offered rewards aggregating five hundred dollars for the apprehension of parties engaged in committing burglaries and highway robberies in that county.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, November 24, 1874.

THE THIRD TERM.

A gentleman, well-known in this city, now a resident of Washington, to whom the President talks, informs me that President Grant has considered the November elections in all their bearings upon the third term question and is entirely satisfied that this question was in no sense whatever, one of the issues. When reminded by this gentleman, that the convention which re-nominated Gen. Dix, resolved that: "The administration of achievements in domestic and foreign policy unsurpassed in the history of the country, and that New York gave a Democratic majority of 50,000, the convention which nominated Mr. Tilden having resolved against a third term for the present incumbent, or for any other President, Grant replied: "The Democratic convention of Pennsylvania, at Pittsburg, thought it premature to even consider the subject, and the question was in no wise brought before the convention; while the Republican convention declared against it most emphatically, and they even went so far as to present Governor Hartranft as the candidate of the Republicans for president in 1876, yet the majority of 35,000 by which Gov. Hartranft was elected is overcome, and the Democrats elect their ticket by several thousand majority.

The fact is the President entertains a lively hope that he will be just as available to the Republicans in 1876 as he was in 1868.

My informant further statedthat if an amendment to the Constitution is made limiting the presidency to one term, General Grant thinks the conservative element of the country under the leadership of such men as Schurz, Trumbull, Palmer, Evans, Medill, Bowles and Halstead will direct the policy of the Republicans in 1876. In that event Grant is of opinion that Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania, will be the most available candidate that could be chosen.

Thoughtful Republicans, who are such from principle, are gratified at the result of the recent elections. Already are its good effects apparent in this city most conspicuously in the sudden and decided determination of the Mysterious Pilgrims to decline all nominations for public offic wherein a popular vote is requisite as a confirmation of their candidacy. The fate of Pilgrim Ash, who fell by the wayside beneath a majority of 1,000, while his colleagues upon the same ticket who were not pilgrims—were elected by 13,000 majority has warned his brother Pilgrims of what is in store for them if they persist in braving public sentiment. The lion in Ash's pilgrimage for the Coronership is too savage a beast for the Prince of Pilgrims, Mr. Rowan, to encounter, and rather than go under, beneath a majority of ten thousand, Pilgrim Rowan gives up his candidacy for Quarter Sessions clerk, and a gentleman, in whom the public have confidence, will be chosen in his stead.

The effect upon prospective candidates for city councils is even more disastrous than upon candidates for Sheriff, Recorder, Register, etc. I expect to see the Republican party in this city nominating for City Councils such gentlemen as Thos. T Tasker, James A. Freeman, John Price Wetherill, Amos R. Little and Chas D. Colliday, to the exclusion of the Glenns', Vorhies', Marcus' and such other public spirited city fathers, whose private enterprise is truly wonderful.

THE FINE ARTS.

As but very few Philadelphians, comparatively speaking, have ever witnessed the work of preparing a model from which to take a bronze casting—for the reason that artist's studios are not generally thrown open to the public—I imagine that those from the country who have witnessed such work are also limited in number, therefore it is a pleasure for me to state that the studio of Mr. George F. Gordon, at the corner of Arch and Juniper streets in this city is open at all times during the day for the free admission of those whose taste or curiosity leads them to study such things. I visited Gordon's Art Studio a few days ago and confess that for the first time in my life, I saw an artist at work; he was moulding the clay into shape for a model from which a colossal statue of George Washington is to be cast, and as far as I am able to judge it will be the grandest statue of Washington yet produced. It was Mr. Gordon who gave us the marble statue of Washington in front of Independence Hall.

I mention this new departure in the fine arts for the reason that I hope to see Philadelphia yet become the Art-Centre of the American continent, and because it is a subject which concerns our whole people. I regard it as another index of that growing spirit of American nationality which will ere long, scorn to import works of art from Europe when they can be produced here much finer and at far less expense.

In this studio of Mr. Gordon is a model for a street lamp-post which is really the most beautiful thing of the kind I have ever seen. I regard it as a cast iron volume which represents the growth of the American nation during its first century.

GEN. N. P. BANKS.

This distinguished gentleman lectured here during the week to an unusually large audience. The General is not reticent as to his opinions upon political questions; he believes that before the dial finger marks the hour which completes the first century of our existence as a nation, we should so amend the Constitution as to limit the presidency to one term, not exceeding six years. The distinguished Congressman says he is not one of Grant's advisers, but it occurs to him that if the President has the time and inclination to study the lesson of the 3d of November, he will scarcely fail to perceive that the same force of circumstances which drove Liberal Republicans to Cincinnati, produced the result so unexpected to the Administration. The third of November 1874, is but the logical conclusion of the Cincinnati convention of May 1872, and if President Grant really is sincere in his assertion that "he will have no other policy than the will of the people," he will reconstruct his cabinet, so as to have it conform as nearly as possible to the "will of the people", so clearly expressed.

To the remark that the "will of the people" appears to be very positively Democratic, and to the question: How is it possible for Gen. Grant to invite Democrats to seats in his cabinet? Gen. Banks made answer: that in the reformation of his cabinet it was not necessary for President Grant to call to his counsel table any other than Republicans: Gen. Banks believed that the selection of Chas. Francis Adams, as the Prime Minister of the President would give entire satisfaction to all New England; for Attorney General, Hon. Wm. M. Evarts or Judge Pierpoints would be eminently satisfactory to New York; for Secretary of the Treasury, the Hon. Hugh M'Cullough would doubtless be the first choice of Ohio and Indiana; while for Secretary of the Interior, your own great war Governor, Andrew Curtin, the man whose magnetism makes all men his friends, would gratify the people of the old Keystone State, Republicans, Liberals, and possibly Democrats. From the far West such a gentleman as Hon. Jas. F. Wilson would doubtless be entirely agreeable to the conservative people from that section, while from the South there are many gentlemen in whom the South have great confidence, such as Hon. Henry Stanberry of Kentucky, Hon. T. A. R. Nelson of Tennessee, Hon. Lewis E. Parsons of Alabama.

General Banks however is of the opinion that no attempt will be made by the President to construct his cabinet in accord with the present sentiment of the people.

Father Gerdiman the priest who violated his vow of celibacy, mentioned in my last letter, was caught in Baltimore just as he was about to take passage for Germany, and he and his wife were brought on to this city. A hearing has been had and the Rev. Father has been placed under $10,000 bail to stand trial in the Sessions Court for the larceny from sixty to seventy thousand dollars. The ex-priest may possibly be convicted of the crime, though I have doubt but it placed on trial for violating a vow of celibacy and running off with Maggie Wittig he would be instantly acquitted. No jury could possibly be found anywhere—made up of men—that would not applaud the fellow's appreciation of feminine beauty, for the girl is handsome, as it is possible to fashion flesh and blood, and nature has lavished upon her a bountiful share of each.

The mania for leaving for an uncertain destination is not confined to Catholic clergymen for I blush to own it that a newspaper editor left in this city here, just as Gerdiman was brought back, taking with him a married woman the wife of a sea captain. The madam was very rich and the editor very poor, and with $50,000 in Governments she is said to have taken with her, she can purchase a nomination for Congress for her man in some of the far off territories, obtain a divorce from her old captain and possibly spend the remainder of her life in—regretting her insane act.

100 YEARS OLD.

The First Troop Philadelphia Cavalry, reached the age of 100 years on the 17th inst. The Centennial celebration of the Troop was a grand affair and lasted three days. On Tuesday the Troop paraded through the principal streets of our city: the first division Pennsylvania militia, second brigade of New Jersey, and Sixth and Seventh regiments of New Jersey militia, and a number of military companies, also paraded with the Troop in honor of the old company.

The first Troop was organized and equipped at private expense, and on the 17th day of November 1774, the services of the troop were accepted by the Continental Congress. On the 23d of January, 1777, they were discharged from active service and were highly complimented by Gen. Washington. The Troop also served in the war of 1812, and in 1824 when LaFayette revisited this country the Troop escorted him in triumph from Trenton, New Jersey to Philadelphia.

The first captain of the company was Abraham Markoe, who commanded it during the Revolution.

During the late rebellion the service of the Troop, then but 87 years old, were tendered to Mr. Lincoln, for 9 days. As an organization it did not acquire renown in the last struggle, possibly on account of its extreme old age, but then the Troop wear such elegant uniforms, it really would have been cruel to have stained with blood their spotless white pants of angora wool. The fighting days of our city Troop ended in 1814, but as a convenience for holiday parades, these centennarians really are a thing of beauty, and the members have a right to wear "button-hole bouquets." on parade.—J. Poetry.

THE JEWELED TREE.

When all the trees were clad in green,
And all the birds were singing,
And blossoms full of incense sweet
Their perfumes forth were flinging—

One tree, amid the joyous scene,
Looked sad and discontented,
And to the gentle summer breeze
In whispering tones lamented.

It murmured to an oriole
That on a bough was swinging:
"Last eventide, in silvery strains,
I heard a poet singing.

Of trees afar, with jeweled fruit,
In flashing diamonds singing;
These green leaves are so commonplace—
For jewels I am pining!"

The summer fled; the trees stood bare
Amid the wintry weather,
Until one night, when rain and frost
Came silently together,—

Then, when the dawn had ushered in
The rosy-fingered morning,
The tree rejoiced at its array
In new and strange adorning.

From every twig and bough there hung
A sparkling crystal pendant;
The proud tree glittered in the sun,
In jewelry resplendent.

But with the night there came a wind,
And with the wind came sorrow;
And then, alas! a piteous case
Was seen upon the morrow.

For when again the morning broke,
The hapless tree presented
A sight to warn all other trees
From being discontented.

The ground was strewn with glittering ice;
The stately boughs lay under;
Born down by its weight of gems,
The tree was snapped asunder!

LITTLE WHIMPY.

Whimpy, little Whimpy,
Cried so much one day,
His grandma couldn't stand it,
And his mother ran away;
His sister climbed the hay-mow,
His father went to town,
And cook flew to the neighbor's
In her shaby kitcken-gown.

Whimpy, little Whimpy,
Stood out in the sun,
And cried until the chickens
And the ducks began to run;
Old Towser in his kennel
Growled in an angry tone,
Then burst his chain, and Whimpy
Was left there, all alone.

Whimpy, little Whimpy,
Cried and cried and cried.
Soon the sunlight vanished,
Flowers begin to hide;
Birdies stopped their singing,
Frogs began to croak.
Darkness came! and Whimpy
Found crying was no joke.

Whimpy, little Whimpy,
Never'll forget the day
When grandma couldn't stand it,
And his mother ran away.
He was waiting by the window
When they all come home to tea,
And a gladder boy than Whimpy
You never need hope to see.

THE FLOWER-GIRL.

O my little sea-side girl,
What's in your garden growing?
"Rock-weeds and tangle-grass,
With the slow tide coming—going;
Samphire and marsh-rosemary,
All along the wet shore creeping;
Sandwort, beach-peas, pimpernel,
Out of nooks and corners peeping."

O my little prairie girl,
What's in bloom among your grasses?
"Spring-beauties, painted-cups,
Flushing when the south wind passes;
Beds of rose-pink centuary;
Compass-flowers of north-east turning;
Larkspur, orange-gold puccoon;
Leagues of lilies flame-red burning."

O my little mountain girl,
Have you anything to gather?
"White everlasting-bloom,
Not afraid of wind or weather;
Sweet-brier, leaning on the crag
That the lady-fern hides under;
Harebells, violets white and blue;
Who has sweeter flowers, I wonder?"

O my little maidens three,
I will lay your pretty posies—
Sea-scented, cloud-bedewed,
Prairie grasses, mountain roses—
On a bed of shells and moss.
Come and bend your bright heads nearer!
Dear though all your blossoms are,
You three human flowers are dearer.

Our Story Teller.

MISS GEORGINE'S HUSBAND.

BY LUCY ELLEN GUERSEY.

Did I ever see a ghost? I don't know just what you mean by a ghost, Miss Bessy, but if you mean the appearance of a person after I had seen him die with my own eyes, and laid him out with my own hands.

I don't exactly know about telling you the story. You see, it's a true story, and a very solemn one, and I shouldn't like to have it laughed at, or to have any one to tell me I didn't see what I did see. But you was always a pretty-behaved young lady, and you know I can't refuse you anything, so if you will sit down quiet and take your work, I'll tell you all about it, my dear.

You know, honey, I'm a very old woman, and when I was young I was a slave to old Judge Cleaveland, over on the Flats. There were slaves in York State then. I was born down in Maryland, but the Judge moved up to these parts when I was very small, and brought his servants with him. We were well enough treated. Judge Cleaveland was a hard, high-temeered man, and used to have awful ugly fits sometimes, but, like most folks of that kind, he could keep his temper well enough when it suited him, and he knew it was easy enough for his servants to run away if they did not like their treatment. When I was eighteen I married Zack Davis, the coachman, and after that we lived mostly in a house of our own. We were free by that time, and we bought a nice little log-house and some land for a garden, but we worked up at the house all the same.

The Judge was a widower when he moved up here, but very soon he married a pretty young lady from the Mohawk Valley. She was only eighteen, and as sweet a child as ever I saw. The Judge meant to be good to her, I guess, but she never seemed happy. When the second little girl was born the Judge was dreadfully disappointed. I suppose he wanted a son to inherit his great estate and keep up the family name. He never was the same to his wife after that. He was polite to her, especially before company, but he had a kind of cold, sneering way with her, that I could see cut her to the heart. Her health failed and she went home to her father's house for a change, and there she died. The Judge seemed a good deal cast down by her death—more than I should have expected. I dare say some things came back to him when it was too late. After the funeral he shut up the house and went aboard. He was in foreign parts or down in New York for ten or more years. The young ladies, Miss Anna and Miss Georgine, stayed with their grandma some years, and then they were put to school in New York. All that time Zack and I lived in the old house to take care of it. It was lonesome enough sometimes, especially in winter, but though I used to go all over the great rooms alone by night and day I never saw any thing then—no not a thing.

Well, when the young ladies were sixteen and seventeen, the Judge wrote to me and told me to clean up the rooms, and have everything ready, for he was coming home. His wild land was growing very valuable, and there was no one to see to it properly, and for that and other reasons he had decided to come home to the Flats to live. So at the time set they came, with loads of new furniture and carpets and what not, and a very nice widow lady for housekeeper. She had a son, an officer in the army and a very fine man, who would willingly have supported her, but she preferred to do for herself

I expected to see Miss Anna the favorite, as she was the eldest, and Miss Georgine had so disappointed her pa by not being a boy; but I soon found out it was the other way. Miss Anna was not pretty. She looked like her ma, and had just such a quiet, gentle way with her. She was afraid of her father, too, as her mother had been, and with some reason—and she was afraid of her sitter too. She didn't care much for company but liked best to sit down and sew or read. Miss Georgine was like her father and had just his free, bold way. She wasn't afraid of anything at all except that she should not be first in everything. She was very handsome, with regular features and beautiful black wavy hair, and long curled eye-lashes. I don't know that I ever saw a handsomer girl, but for real goodness and truth she was no more to be compared with Miss Anna than a great red woodpecker is to a little sweet blue-bird. She always contrived to get the best of everything, and if she got into trouble or mischief, she generally made her father believe it was Anna's fault. She made a great show of openness and saying what she thought, but she didn't think all she said, by a great deal.

When Miss Anna was about eighteen, Mrs. Gracie's son came on a visit to his mother, and a very fine, sober, nice young man he was. Every one liked him, especially the Judge, who could not make enough of him till he found that the captain and Miss Anna talked to each other; then he began to cool off. Captyin Gracie stayed at the tavern in the village, and called almost every day to see his mother, and before he left he asked the Judge for Miss Anna. Then there was a time. The Judge went into one of his furious rages, ordered both mother and son out of the house, and shut Miss Anna up in her room. Miss Georgine was as bad as her father, and the way they treated that poor girl was shameful. But Miss Anna had got her spunk up, and she contrived—I never knew how—to send word to Captain Gracie. A few days after, when the Judge was out about his land, Captain Gracie drove up to the door, and asked for Miss Anna. She must have expected him, for she came down in her traveling-dress, and her bag in her hand. Miss Georgine stormed and scolded and sent all ways for her father, but nobody could find him, and in fact I don't think anybody tried. Miss Anna bade her sister a kind farewell, and got into the carriage, and that was the last we saw of her for many a long year. They were married that same day in the city, and went away wherever his regiment was. Captain Gracie sent her father his address and a copy of his marriage lines, but the Judge never took any notice, only he handed me the paper and told me to pack up her clothes and things and send them to her. I don't approve of runaway matches as a general thing, but I can't say I blamed Miss Anna one bit.

About this time Judge Cleaveland found out that he needed a clerk, or Secretary as he called it; so he sent for Mr. Bogardus, a cousin of his wife's, to come and live in his house and attend to his business. Mr. Bogardus was a fine handsome man, about thirty, very grave and sober; but with beautiful manners—a real fine gentleman. The Judge made much of him in his pompous condescending way. Miss Georgine began by being very cold and scornful, but she soon changed her tone when she found her cousin did not take any notice of it or her, and began to be very polite to him. He had a fine voice, and played beautifully on the violin, and she used to ask him to sing and play with her, especially when they had company; but he almost always excused himself and would often stay in the library till midnight, writing or reading. He seemed like a smart man, and yet he never accomplished anything for himself. He was one of the unlucky ones, poor fellow.

But the more Mr. Bogardus kept out of Mias Georgine's way the more she courted him. That was her fashion. If there were ten men in the room and she had nine of them about her, she didn't care anything about it till she got the tenth. She always had plenty of sweethearts, being such a beauty and a great heiress besides. Mr. Bogardus rested a good while, but by and by I saw a change. He began to be more attentive to his cousin—to sing with her evenings, and sometimes to go out riding and walking with her. Miss Georgine was altered too. I never saw her so gentle and so—"lovable?" yes that's just the word, my dear! as she was that summer; and thinks I to myself, "My beauty, you're caught at last, but I wonder what your father will say." For you see he looked on Mr. Bogardus only as a kind of upper servant, for all he was Mrs. Cleaveland's own cousin.

The Judge didn't seem to notice for a while, but by and by I think he got his eyes opened. He went down to New York for a week or two, and when he came back, he called Mr. Bogardus and told him he had found him a fine position with a gentleman who was going out to Brazil to set up some kind of manufactures, a place of great trust, and where he would make a fortune in no time. Mr. Bogardus was much pleased. He was always ready to take up any new notion, and he thought he should make himself rich directly. But Miss Georgine had a bad headache that day, and she wasn't well for a week afterward.

The very day Mr. Bogardus left, I was sitting in my own door, and as I looked up I saw Miss Georgine walking across the field toward my house. I was rather surprised, for she wasn't fond of walking, and almost always rode her pony wherever she wanted to go. She walked in her weary kind of way too, and when she came near, I saw she looked very pale. I got out the rocking-chair for her and made much of her, but she set down on a little stool and put her beautiful head in my lap, as her poor mother had done a many time, and says she, bursting out crying,

'Oh, Aunt Dolly! My husband is gone!'

Honey, you might have knocked me down with a feather. I couldn't think what she meant at first, and thought she had got light-headed from being out in the sun.

'Child,' says I, 'you don't know what you are saying.'

'Yes I do—too well!' says she; and then she told me between her sobs that she and Mr. Bogardus had been privately married while her father was away, the day that they went down to the city together, and that they meant to keep it quiet till Mr. Bogardus made his fortune.

'I never meant to tell anybody,' says she, 'but, Aunt Dolly, I could not bear it all alone, and I knew I could trust you.'

Well, I could have wished she had choosen some one else, but I tried to comfort her as well as I could. Presently I said, 'Ah, child, you can feel for your poor sister now!'

'That was very different!' says she, lifting up her head as proud as could be; 'I have not disgraced myself as Anna did. My husband is a gentleman—not a servant's son.'

When she said that, Miss Bessy, I knew she had more yet to suffer.

Says I, 'Miss Georgine, I shall never betray you, you may be sure, but you ought to tell your father. Suppose he finds it out; what will he say, and what will you do?'

'He won't find it out!' says she, 'and if he does, I shall know what to do.' But then she put her head down, in my lap again, and oh, how she did cry! I could not but pity her, though she showed such a wrong spirit; and I tried to tell her of a better comfort than mine, but she would not hear a word of that. She did not want any cant, she said. By and by, I made her some tea and coaxed her to drink it, and to eat a little, and when the sun got low, I walked home with her. She was always gentler with me after that, and whenever she got a letter from Mr. Bogardus she would come and tell me about it. I was on thorns for a while, and watched her as a cat watches a mouse; but everything went on as usual, and nobody but our two selves knew or mistrusted anything about the matter.

Miss Georgine got her letters pretty regular for about six months, and then they stopped, and she never had another. At first she pined a good deal, and I was afraid she was going into a decline; but presently I saw a change. Her old proud self came back, only harder and colder than before. She was handsomer than ever, and more fond of company and admiration. One day I ventured to ask her if she had heard any more of Mr. Bogardus.

Oh, how her eyes flashed as she said, 'Never mention that man's name to me again! He has shamed and deserted me!' says she.

'You don't know that,' says I; 'he may be dead.'

'He is not dead!' she answered. 'My father heard he was married to a Spanish widow up at the mines.'

'I do not believe it,' says I boldly. 'It is not a bit like him.' For you see I had come to know him pretty well. I had nursed him in his sick turns, of which he had a good many, and though I did not approve the secret marriage, I liked him and felt like standing up for him.

'Never mention his name to me again, Dolly!' says she, and I did not for a long time, till the day came that I had to do it.

Well, the time went on, year after year in much the same way. Our folks spent their summers on their own estate, and the winters in New York or at the South with the Judge's family, spending a deal of money and seeing a deal of fine company. It was nine years that very spring since Mr. Bogardus went away, when after they had been home a couple of days, Miss Georgine rode over to see me. She brought me a fine gown and some other things from New York, and after she had showed them to me, says she, speaking proud and careless like,—

'Aunt Dolly, I want you to come up to the house next week, to make my wedding cake and keep house awhile, because I am going to be married.'

Miss Bessy I could not believe my ears; and says I, 'Miss Georgine I don't know as I quite understand you.'

'You are growing stupid, Dolly!' says she pettishly. 'I am going to be married to Mr. Philip Livingstone, and I want you to make the cake.'

I do not know what made me but I spoke right out. 'Mrs. Bogardus,' says I, 'have you told your pa and Mr. Livingstone about your first marriage?'

'How dare you call me by that name?' says she, and her eyes fairly blazed. 'No, I have not told them and I shall not. You can, if you choose!' says she.

'How much do you mean to ask me as the price of keeping the secret I was fool enough to tell you?'

Then I flared up. 'Mrs. Bogardus,' says I, 'there's the door. Please walk out of it, and do not come insulting a woman in her own house that thinks as much of herself as you do, if she is black. If that's what you think of me, you may get some one else to make your cake!' says I.

Well, she saw she had gone too far. Like her father, she could command her temper well enough when she chose, and she knew she could not get any one to make such a cake as mine, if she went down on her knees to them. Besides, I knew all the ways of the house, and they could not do without me. So she came down and said she was sorry, and she did not mean anything, and so on, till she coaxed me round, and I promised to do all she wanted.

'But if it was the last word I ever spoke, I do say you ought to tell Mr. Livingstone,' says I. 'What if Mr. Bogardus should come back some day?'

I knew I was doing right, but I felt sorry for her when I saw how pale she turned. 'That unhappy man is dead long ago,' says she, 'and if he were not, it is nearly nine years since I heard from him, and that is enough to release me. But you'll be glad to hear,' says she, 'that I have coaxed my father to write to sister Anna, and ask her son to the wedding. You know she is a widow now, and there is no use in keeping up the quarrel any longer.'

So then I agreed to make the cake and keep house for her father while she was away. They were coming back to spend the summer at home. But I did not feel happy. I knew she was doing wrong, and that harm would come of it.

The wedding went off nicely. Mr. Livingstone was a fine, handsome man, a good deal older than Miss Georgine. He looked good and sensible, and it was easy to see that he fairly worshipped his wife. My heart ached for both of them, because I knew as things were they never could be happy. You see I felt sure Mr. Bogardus was not dead.

How did I feel sure? Well, it was just like this. Whenever any of my folks had died away from me, I had always seen them in my dreams that same night. I saw my own brother, who was drowned in the lake, and my aunt with her baby, and Miss Georgine's mother. Now Mr. Bogardus was fond of me. He said once I was more like a mother than any one had ever been to him, and I knew he would not die without coming to let me know.

Miss Anna, that was, and her boy were at the wedding and stayed a fortnight after. She wore her deep widow's weeds and looked thin and worn, but she had a sweet, placid, happy look, worth more than all her sister's beauty. She told me that through all her trials, in sickness and loneliness, and losing her husband and her children, she had never regretted her marriage, not one minute.

The boy was a fine, manly fellow, the image of his father. The Judge took to him greatly, and wanted Mrs. Gracie to come home to live; but she excused herself and said she must take care of her husband's mother, who was feeble and needed her. She told me privately that she did not think such a life would be good for her boy, and I dare say she was right.

The bride and bridegroom came home after a month and settled down with us for the season, and the day she came home I noticed a scared look in Miss Georgine's face that I never saw there before.

That night I was sitting in my own house, (and glad enough I was to get back to it,) when some one knocked softly at the door.

Zack opened it, and the minute he did so he cried out, 'Lord 'a mercy!' I jumped up, and then I thought surely I saw a ghost, but I did not; It was Mr. Bogardus himself, but oh how thin and pale, and with his beautiful hair white as snow.

'Will you take me in, Dolly?' says he. 'I am sick to death, old friend, and I have come to die with you.'

In a minute all the consequences rushed on my mind, but I could not help that. We took him and put him to bed in our best room, and as soon as the light fell on his face, I saw it was marked for death. I sat up with him all night. He did not sleep much, and seemed to want to talk, and I knew it could not make much difference, so I let him have his way. He told me had written home by every mail for more than a year after he stopped getting any letters in return. From all I could make out he had gone on just in his old way, trying first one thing and then another, always thinking he was just going to make for himself a great fortune.

'But I never was unfaithful to Georgine, not for one moment,' said he. 'I always loved and never distrusted her. When my health failed, and I must die, I felt I must see Georgine once more. I landed in New York, and there I heard she was married, and saw her walking with her husband.'

And then he begged me to ask Miss Georgine to come and see him if only for a moment, before he died.

'I will never betray her!' said he. 'No one will think it strange that she should come to see me. But oh, mammy,'—he used to call me mammy,—'I can not leave the world till I see her once more.'

The next morning at breakfast-time I went up to the house and told the Judge and Miss Georgine that Mr. Bogardus was at my house, that he had not many hours to live, and would take it kind if they would come and see him.

'Poor young man, is he so low?' says the Judge. 'He should have come to us; but he was always fond of you, Dolly. I will certainly come over, and you must take anything he needs from the house.' And then he turns to his daughter and says, 'You will go to see your poor cousin, Georgine?'

'Why no, I think not!' says she, pouring out her coffee, as unconcerned as could be. 'I never took any special interest in your clerk, papa, and I am not fond of doleful scenes. I do not think I could endure to be in the house with a dying person.'

I saw Mr. Livingstone look at her as she said these last words, and he answered her very gravely:

'Sometime, Georgine, you will have to be in the room with a dying person.'

'Time enough when it comes!' said she lightly. 'Of course I am sorry for the poor man, but it is quite out of the question that I should go and see him. He is nothing to me.'

I was not going to be put off like that. I followed her to her room, and says to her, 'Mrs. Livingstone, what answer am I to carry to that dying man?'

'Tell him I will not see him!' said she, speaking hard and slow. 'He is nothing to me, nor I to him.'

'Won't you send him your forgiveness?' I asked her.

'No!' she cried passionately. 'I will never forgive him—never! Tell him that, if you like.'

'Mrs. Livingstone,' said I, 'you will bring down the judgment of Heaven on your head!' And with that I left her. I was not afraid of her, whoever else was.

It was hard to go back to Mr. Bogardus with such a message but he would have me tell him her very words. He groaned and was silent for a few minutes, and then says he,

'Dolly, tell her she shall see me, alive or dead!' And then he fainted, and I had hard work to bring him to. Later in the day Judge Cleaveland and Mr. Livingstone came down. Mr. Bogardus did not say much to them, only thanked the Judge for his goodness to him, and begged forgiveness if he had ever injured him. The Judge said everything that was kind—he was a good deal softened in those days. Then Mr. Livingstone asked Mr. Bogardus if he should read and pray with him, and Mr. Bogardus said yes. So Mr. Livingstone read a chapter and made a beautiful prayer. He was a very religious man in his quiet way, which made it the more strange that he should be taken with Miss Georgine. When he got up from his knees, Mr. Bogardus stretched out his hand to him.

'Thank you, Livingstone, you have done me good!' said he, squeezing his hand hard. 'I want to tell you that there is no bitterness in my heart toward any human being. It is all washed away. God bless you!'

Honey, it did me good to hear him speak in that way to the man who was, as you might say, standing in his shoes. The minute they were gone Mr. Bogardus fainted once more. I thought he would never breathe again but he did, and seemed to brighten up a good deal. Zack thought he was better, but I did not. I had seen too many people die, not to know the lighting up for death. About midnight, when we were both sitting by him, he asked to be raised up and have his head laid on my breast, and then he asked Zack to get him some fresh water from the spring. When we were alone together, he looked up in my face and says he, 'Mammy, tell Georgine that I have never been unfaithful to her, and I shall be faithful still. She must see me, alive or dead.'

Says I, 'Oh, Mr. Bogardus, my dear boy, you must not bear malice now.'

'I do not!' said he. 'I told Livingstone true when I said that all bitterness was washed away. But it is borne in on my mind, that for her own sake, alive or dead Georgine must see me, and you must tell her so, will you?'

'I will!' says I. I never mistrusted that he meant anything but that she should come and look at him after he was dead.

'That is all!' said he. 'Kiss me, mammy. You have been more like a mother to me than any woman was before, and you won't lose by it, I know.'

Then I kissed him, and he just laid his head on my breast and with one sigh he was gone.

Never mind me, Miss Bessy honey! You see I loved him dearly, with all his faults, and dying on my breast and all.

We laid him out, Zack and I, and though I have done the same for many a one, I never saw a sweeter smile on the face of a man, woman or child, than rested on his. As soon as it was time in the morning, I went up to the house and told them as they sat to breakfast.

'So he has gone, poor soul!' says the Judge, wiping his eyes. 'Take no trouble about the funeral, Dolly; I will arrange it all. Georgine, can you find some mourning for Dolly? I dare say she will like to wear it.'

'I should be much obliged if you would Mrs. Livingstone,' says I.

She told me to come to her room and she would see. So I went up after breakfast, and she pulled out a couple of nice black dresses and a black bonnet and crape veil which she had worn a year before in mourning for her grandmother.

'There, you may have those!' said she in a careless contemptuous way, 'though I do not see why you should wear mourning. But I suppose you think it is genteel.'

She always riled me when she spoke in that way, but I kept myself down, and after I had thanked her for the things, I told her Mr. Bogardus' message. She winced a little in spite of herself, and the scared look came into her eyes again, but it was gone in a minute, and she said coldly,

'Dolly, there has been enough of this! If you mention that person's name to me again we shall quarrel!'

I had no call to mention it again, for I had cleared my conscience, and that was enough. Mr. Bogardus was buried next day from the church, the weather being warm and our house small. Mr. Livingstone sent the carriage for Zack and me, and Zack and Mr. Livingstone, and some gentlemen from the village, were the bearers. It was quite a large funeral, and the coffin and everything was as nice as one could wish to see.

The next morning Judge Cleaveland and Mr. Livingstone went down to the city to some convention, expecting to be gone a week. That very day the cook they had brought from New York took offense at something, and she and the other woman packed up and went down to the village, leaving Miss Georgine alone. So she sent down to ask if Zack and I would not come up and stay, because she was expecting company; so we went of course. I found everything at sixes and sevens—no cake in the house fit to look at, all the summer fruits spoiling to be done up, and so on. I sent for my niece Car'line to come and help, and we soon got things in ordor.

The second night, I sent Zack and Car'line to bed, and sat up till late, attending to some plum cake I had in the great oven. It was a fancy of mine when I had any special baking, to do it late in the evening, when I had the kitchen to myself.

Well, I got my cake done to my liking—I little knew what kind of party I was baking for—and then I thought I would take a look through the house and see if all was right, as I used to do when I lived there before.

The house was an odd one in shape. A long, wide hall ran through the front part. When it got to the back it turned in an L as they say now, and went on to a side door, and in this side hall were the stairs. At the top of them was Miss Georgine's own room, and at the foot a door leading by a passage to the kitchen. Half-way from this door to the front was the library door, with a narrow glass window over it.

I had opened the passage door, and had just turned down the lamp that always burned at the foot of the stairs, when I saw that there was a light in the library. Thinks I, 'What in the world is Miss Georgine doing in the library at this time of night?' Before I could move I heard some one's hand on the lock, and stood still to see who it should be.

Miss Bessy, as sure as you sit there, I saw the appearance of Mr. Bogardus just as he used to look when he was a young man and worked in that library for Judge Cleaveland. I wasn't scared, that I know of, but I couldn't move. He came straight towards me, but didn't look at me, and passing as close to me as I am to you he walked rather slowly up the stairs to Miss Georgine's room. When he reached it, he turned and looked at me, holding up his hand in a warning kind of way, and then he opened the door and went in.

I could not go up-stairs—something held me back. I sat down on the bottom stair and listened a long time, but I didn't hear a sound, and by and by I crept away to bed my teeth chattering as if I had an ague fit.

The next morning I was in the dining-room when Miss Georgine come down. Child, I should not have known her! She was gray as ashes, only with a purple spot on each cheek, and her face was all drawn and sunked. She looked thirty years older than when she went to bed.

Says I, 'Mrs. Livingstone are you sick?'

'I have a headabke, but the air will drive it off,' says she, proud to the last. 'I think, Dolly, that as our friends have written to put off their visit. I will go down to the city to Mr. Livingstone, I need a little change, and I suppose you won't mind staying here a few days with Car'line for company,' says she. 'You will not be afraid without your husband, will you?'

Well, I was,—a little—after what I had seen there is no denying; but I felt that somehow she ought to be with her husband; so I said, 'Oh, no, I wasn't afraid, I had Car'line for company, and the gardner could sleep in the house.' I helped Miss Georgine put up her things, and dressed her. She was quiet and gentle-like for her, but when I said, 'Mrs Livingstone, I'm afraid you ain't well enough for such a long ride all by yourself,' she just laughed that hard laugh I hated so to hear.

'You are nervous yourself, Dolly,' she said. 'I have only a headache, but you know that always makes me look ghastly. It will all be gone in an hour.'

I didn't say any more, but I knew better. On the steps she turned to me and held out her hand.

'Good-bye, Dolly,' said she. 'You've always been good to me, and I am afraid I have sometimes been cross to you, but do not remember it against me.'

Child, I was always glad she said that. I watched the carriage away, and then I went back to her room and put it all in nice order with my own hands. I felt full of anxiety, and I kept myself as busy as I could. Zack didn't come back the next day, nor the next; but the morning of the fourth day, Car'line looked out of the window when she got up, and says she, 'Aunt Dolly, Uncle Zack is coming on horseback as hard as ever he can drive. Something must have happened!'

Something had happened, sure enough. Zack had been riding ever since midnight, and he could hardly speak, he was so tired; but at last he got it out. Miss Georgine had died in a fit the night before, and the body was to be brought home that day.

'What time did she die?' I asked presently.

'It was just half-past eleven when she took the first fit,' said he; 'and she died at the same hour last night.' Then I knew.

Well, they brought her home in her coffin and laid her in the front parlor, and when all was done, I went to the Judge and told him that I was going to watch myself, and nobody else would be needed. You see, I did not know what might happen, and I didn't want stories going all over country. I told Zack he might take a blanket and lie down on the sofa in the back parlor, and I would sit up.

About half-past eleven, I went into the room where the corpse lay. I had half a mind to call Zack to go with me, but I knew how tired he was, and I let him sleep. There was a shaded lamp in the room, and I had a candle in my hand that I sat down on a table near by and stood a few minutes looking at her. She was not a pleasant corpse to look at. Those same purple spots were on her cheeks, and a dark frown on her forehead; but the worst was that her eyes wouldn't stay shut. I had tried every way so close them, and the doctor had tried, but they would not stay shut!

I turned away and went to the window, when something, I don't know what, made me turn round. Then I saw him for the second time—saw Mr. Bogardus looking into his wife's coffin with just the same sad, sweet smile that was on his face when he bade me good-by. As I stood looking—for I had no power to move—the appearance stooped down, and seemed to kiss the corpse, and then vanished away, and I saw it no more.

I was like stone turned to stone for a few minutes. When I came to myself, Miss Bessy, there was a change! Her eyes were shut—the long curled lashes resting on her cheeks. The ugly purple spots had faded away; the fine face was like marble, and the pale lips had a meek, peacsful look, such as I had never seen them wear since the days that she and Mr. Bogardus were lovers.

That's all the story. Poor Miss Georgine was buried next day, alongside the only man she ever loved. I can't but hope it was well with both of them, poor unlucky children. The doctor, he talked learnedly about contraction of muscles and what not, but doctors don't know anything, and he had't seen what I had. My own opinion is that she wasn't free to go till it was made up, and that they made it up then.

LIVE FOR SOMETHING.—Thousands of men breathe move and live—pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They did not a particle of good in this world; and none were blessed by them; none could point to them as the instruments of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke could be recalled; and so they perish, their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, oh, man immortal? Live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. "No! your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you left behind as the starh on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as brightly on earth as the stars of heaven."

ANECDOTE OF A SPIDER.—Mr. Moggride in his studies in Natural History had been in the habit of immersing, for preservation, his different specimens of spiders and ants in bottles of alcohol. He saw that they struggled for a minute, but he thought that sensation was soon extinguished and that they were soon free from suffering. On one occasion he wished to preserve a large female spider and twenty-four of her young ones, that he had captured. He put the mother into a bottle of alcohol, and saw that after a few minutes she folded up her legs upon her body and was at rest. He them put into the bottle the young ones, who, of course manifested acute pain. What was his surprise to see the mother arouse herself from her lethargy, dart around to, and gather her young ones to her bosom, fold her legs over them, again relapse into insensibility, until at last death came to her relief, and the limbs, no longer controlled by this maternal instinct, released their grasp and became dead. The effect of the exhibition upon him is a lesson to our common humanity. He has never since repeated the experiment, but has applied chloroform before immersion.

Judging from the above, the spider is certainly superior to the human animal, in the fact that alcohol does not destroy her natural affection.

Ayer's
Sarsaparilla

Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out the great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. Impurities or diseases that have lurked in the system for years soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and eruptive disorders of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, and internal Ulcerations of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhœa, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poisons.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even where no disorder appears, people feel better, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor and a new lease of life.

It prepares the Blood to furnish a proper support to all the vital properties. It enriches the constituents of the Blood upon which the vital energy of the system is dependent. It infuses the proper degree of animal heat in the system. It purges from the system the morbid humors which retard its natural functions. It imparts vitality and elasticity to every organ of the body. It corrects all derangements, however trivial, which are the first origin of Disease. It promotes the operation of the digestive organs. It improves the appetite and removes all disagreeable feeling after eating. It perfects digestion, rendering it natural and easy. It acts as a mild and efficacious stomachic. It elevates the standard of all the vital forces. It strengthens the nervous fibres and diffuses a calm throughout the nervous system. It destroys all morbid conditions of the mind. It revives the physical energies by infusing new life and power into the system. It fortifies the system against the dangers of malaria, fluctuations of the temperature changes in the climate, &c. In short, it prepares the system for the radical change to be wrought in its condition, and restores it to perfect health and natural vigor.

A NEW DEMOCRATIC PAPER.—There has been considerable talk in Democratic circles lately about a proposed new Democratic paper to be started about the first of the year. The Watchman of last week in speaking of the new project says that there is a rumor that it is to be a continuation of the "True Democrat," another that it is to be Brown's Republican revived. Rumor hath it wrong, and although it isn't much of our business, we propose to speak right out in meeting and tell all we know about this new Democratic organ. Our authority, which is good, says the new paper will be a joint stock corporation with a capital of $10,000 which will be divided into shares of $25,00 each. The stock is said to be already pledged. The material, etc., will cost about $5,000, leaving as much more for a working capital. The paper will be managed by a board of directors and the editor or editors will be subject to the direction and advice of the board. The principles upon which they propose to run it are, that it shall be the "organ" of the Democratic party of Centre County, that its editor or editors will not be candidates for office; that it will always support the Democratic ticket as made by the county conventions; and that it will not interfere in any nominations. These requirements they say are not found in the Democratic Watchman and it is owing chiefly to the course of the latter paper, in the late campaign and in former campaigns, that has, as its opponents say, created the necessity for the new organ. They, the parties who propose to start it, urge against Mr. Meek, that he interferes with county nominations; that he has been a candidate himself every year for the last seven years; that he refuses sometimes to support the nominees when made; that he thereby injures the party and would ultimately work its overthrow, in this county; that he refused to support Mackey, Wallace and Orvis in the late campaign; in short that he has done about as he pleased as an independent Democratic journalist. In regard to Mr. Meek's course, they found all their necessities for the new "organ" It is quite evident that the "Watchman" for some time past has done about as it pleased. It has frequently made efforts to place its friends in nomination for county offices. although it can hardly be said that the present Court House brigade are all of the "Watchman's" make or even its friends. Mr. Meek has been a candidate for office frequently. It is also true that he sometimes refuses to support some of the Democratic candidates. In the late contest his influence for Alexander and McEnnally was quite apparent, and although his paper did not take as strong a position in their favor as it might have done, yet his personal energy and work in their favor told quite distinctly on the result in this county. At the same time, he was confined to his room for several weeks, with a sore eye. Had he been able to be about all the time there is no telling how much more danger he would have done to those whom he opposed. These we say are the reasons his political opponents, in his own party, have for starting another Democratic paper at the county seat. We admire the "Watchman's pluck in standing up to its principles and fighting its opponents whether in the party or out of the party. Still, from our standpoint, we will be pleased to see as much turbulency in the ranks of the enemy as their disagreements may produce.

As financial backers the new journal will have D. G. Bush, Esq., Adam Hoy, Esq., J. P. Gephart, Esq., J. D. Shugart, Esq., and Ex Sheriff Kline; and as general supporters, in a moral sense, it will have D. F. Fortney, Esq., J. S. Barnhart, Esq., H. Y. Stitzer, Esq., Hon. S. T. Shugart, Capt. J. H. Morrison, Judge Orvis and others who have grown tired of Meek's dictation and favoritism. The new paper, we understand, will be generally Democratic and its principal object, it is claimed, will be to educate the masses up to a purer standard of Democracy than has been advocated by the Watchman and its supporters. We have the assurance that it will be a high toned and conservative journal one that will frown down the bitter and vindictive spirit that has always manifested itself through the columns of Meek's paper and will be the representative of the more decent and conservative portion of the Democracy of the county. The gentleman named are capable of giving the Democracy of Centre county a journal of which they need not feel ashamed as they possess the ability in a marked degree, most all being lawyers by profession and members of the Bellefonte bar.

TWO REBEL FLAGS.—The Georgia State Agricultural Society, whose fair was held at Atlanta a few days since, offered three premiums for the best drilled military companies. The first, $500; Second, $250; Third, $150. The "Oglethorp Guards," of Agusta, carried off the first prize. The prize was awarded this company, not so much for its superior drill, but because it marched into the grounds with two Rebel flags flying! Comment is as useless as it would be unnecessary.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

—The Old and New published by Roberts Brothers, 143 Washington St., Boston, Mass. for December is on our table. This magazine is conducted by Edward E. Hall. Need we say anything more in regard to its character. It is first-class and will be found of interest to all. Its contents are chaste, high-toned and moral.

—Demorest's Monthly for December has come to our table more beautiful than ever if that were possible. We regard this justly celebrated monthly as one of the best if not the best fashion book in America, every number that contains a pattern of some late style, these alone would in a year be worth more to any lady than the full price of the subscription which is only $3.00 a year. Address W. Jennings Demorest, 17 East 14th St., New York.

—The proprietors of The People's Monthly, an illustrated magazine, published at Pittsburgh, have purchased the material and good will of The To-Day Printing & Puplishing Co., of Philadelphia, including the large list of subscribers. The People's Monthly is a western Penna enterprise, and a deservedly popular one. We have no doubt that the subscribers of To-Day will be very well satisfied with the change. We feel confident that the managers of the monthly will do every thing in their power to make them so. There were quite a number of subscribers to To-Day in this county and to them we say, you will find The People's Monthly a worthy substitute.

—Demorest's Young America. Christmas number for December is on hand in good season. This magazine is intended especially for boys and girls. The present number being the Christmas number is a little extra, although it is always good. Enclosed with it we have "Dottie Dimple's Doll Patterns" which will interest the little girls and afford instruction and amusement at the same time. The subscription price of this excellent little magazine in only $1.00 a year. It is a very good plan to encourage the young folks in habits of reading, and nothing will do this better than to let them have some books and magazines, that they can consider all their own. The Young America is a work that it will be a pleasure and profit for young folks to read. Office of Publication No 17 East Fourteenth st., New York.

—St. Nicholas for September opens with a handsome illuminated article on the celebrated "Garden of the Gods," in Colorado. Among the other instructive articles are the "The Boy Astronome," by Hesekiah Butterworth; "The Chickadees," by Harvey Wilder; "African Fashions," by Olive Thorne; "Altorf and William Tell," by Miss Emma D. Southwick; and "Holiday Harbor," an excellent article by Mrs. S. B. C. Samuels, showing the boys and girls how to build a city, with all the public buildings, steamboats, railroad trains, etc., necessary for its prosperity.

—PETERSON'S JOURNAL for December ALL ARTICLES COMPLETE IN EACH NUMBER. We have received the first number of this Magazine, —that for December, and can truly say that this new enterprise opens in the most promising manner. This number contains twelve first-class stories. all published complete. many of them written by authors of high ability and reputation. "A DANGEROUS MARRIAGE," by Nora Perry, "MRS. GATHRIGHT'S STORY," by Florence Percy Allen, "STRONGER THAN DEATH," by Eleanor C. Donnelly, "BY THE SAD SEA WAVES," "TOLD AT NIGHTFALL," "A STORY OF A VINAGRETTE, etc., are all unusually excellent. We may specify also a story called KING SOLOMON'S OPAL, by Henry Peterson, a critical paper upon Bryant's THANATOPSIS, two interesting articles, one upon CAMP LIFE AT THE DELAWARE WATER GAP, the other upon THE PLEASURE GROUNDS AND DRIVES OF WASHINGTON, and a good poem.

To all those desiring a first-class magazine, a large majority of whose pages are devoted to the publication of the best fiction of the day, we can recommend this. The publishers, formerly connected for many years with the Saturday Evening Post and The Lady's Friend, will, in the management of this new periodical, have the benefit of a long and varied experience. The mechanical getting up of the magazine is unexceptionable; the paper being excellent and the cover decidedly handsome and novel in appearance. Terms: $3.00 a year in advance. An extra copy will be supplied free for one year to any person sending a club of five subscribers at $3 00 each. The postage will be prepaid by the publishers, without extra charge, in accordance with the new law. Specimen copies 25 cents. H. Peterson & Co., 920 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

GOLD 1.11⅝

It is a fact worthy of note, that the city banks, as usual, are publishing notices of their semi-annual dividend, which seem to be as large, as they were in times when all kinds of business was prospering. We have no doubt but the country banks have been quite as prosperous; but they do not publish to the world the amount of dividends they declare. Perhaps it is not their interest to do so. These dividends indicate somewhat, the situation of the borrower whose calling languishes on account of dull times, who is compelled to pay interest or discount on dead stock, book accounts, etc. on which the banks prosper to the detriment of all other interests. If it was interest or discount the borrower is actually called on to pay, there would not be so much room for complaint; but it is the heavy shaves, that the middle classes are compelled to endure, that causes the outlook to be more gloomy every day. Congress will assemble within a fortnight, and it is to be hoped that the lesson so recently taught the majority of that body, will stimulate them to legislate for the people at large during the short time they will be allowed to remain at the Capitol. It is doubtful whether legislation will help the matter, but we believe that a majority of the people think that congress can provide for the emergency and in the event that that body should fail to take advantage of the golden opportunity it will be interpreted that the politicians of the Dominant party are acting to punish the people for their infidelity at the late election. The masses of people look upon the currency question in the following manner: The moneyed men in the country and the bankers generally oppose an increase in the volume of currency, and also demand a resumption of specia payments. They do this because they now control the price of money, and can enhance the rates of interest.

The great mass of business men, expect the traffickers in our cities, and the producing classes of the country, including all workers, desire an increase in the volume of currency to increase the facilities for doing business—and also to prevent the moneyed men locking up currency so as to check business, and at the same time derange all the business interests of the country, while at the same time it enriches these money changers at the expense of the producers.

Those who advocate an increase in the volume of currency are in favor of advancing the productive interests of the country, while those who oppose it are playing into the hands of the money changers. So invariably is this the case that you can place your finger on each representative in Congress after he expresses an opinion on the subject and class him where he properly belongs. The party in power has but a short time to retrieve its fallen fortunes. Should it improve the hour and so legislate the coming winter as will cause trade to revive in the spring at furthest, the good work will have been accomplished and those who are now suffering and who virtually changed their votes for the time being, will hail the result as the beginning of a new era and will re-step into the ranks of the Republican and march solid column to the [illegible] that will await us in 1876.

Philadelphia Market Report.

Monday, Nov. 23, 1874.

REMARKS—There is but little change to record in trade circles, and the disposition to only purchase for immediate consumption, continues to prevail everywhere. A spirit of economy evidently pervades all sections of our country and all classes, which accounts for the present very restricted consumption of merchandize generally. All kinds of industrial pursuits are held in obeyance, and as a consequence a large number of artiets, artisans and laborers are out of employment The present dullness in buisness can be accounted for by this relaxation of industral efforts, but it is evident that there are other causes which contribute to the depression of the times, and among them are the feelings of financial distrust and the commercial lassitude in all parts of the world. Cotton, Breadstuffs, and all our great productions comparatively cheap, some of them below cost of production, and yet buyers persistently refuse to anticipate future wants.

WHEAT—With continued light arrivals for this period of the year, and rather more inquiry from the local millers, the market has been decidedly strong, and choice Red and Amber commands rather better prices. Spring is also attracting more attention for exportation. Sales of 8,000 bus Ohio and Indiana Red at $1,22a1.26; 16,000 bus do Amber at $1,24a1,28; 400 bus Michigan do, choice, at $1,30. White ranges from $1,30 to $1,37, as in quality. To-day the market closed less active. Receipts for the week, 125,000 bus.

RYE—Is lower. Sales of 600 bus Penna. at $1, and 1,600 bus Western at 98c a $1. To-day 400 bus Western sold at $1, and 500 bus Penna. at $1,03. Receipts for the week, 300 bus.

CORN—There is a steady inquiry, and with moderate offerings prices are well maintained. Sales of 20,000 bus old Penna., Southern and Western Yellow at 93a94c. Receipts for the week, 40,800 bus.

OATS—Are quite active, and prices are well sustained. Sales of 38,000 bus Western White at 63@63½; 10,500 bus do do very choice, at 64 @65c; 8,700 bus light mixed at 62a62½c. Receipts for the week, 72,400 bus.

SEEDS—CLOVERSEED is in better demand, but supplies come in slowly. Sales of 1,500 bus at 8@8¼c for fair and prime Penna., and 8¼@ 9¼c for Western. Timothy is nominal at $2.60 @2.65.

Grain and Flour Markets.

BELLEFONTE, NOV. 25th, 1874.

Wheat is about the only grain that is being offered for sale in the Bellefonte market at present. We again note a decline of five cents per bushel. The situation of the wheat market is this, viz: There is more wheat in Centre county than can be consumed in it. The price at the mills in Bellefonte has been from ten to fifteen cents per bushel higher for several weeks than it has at any other market accessable to Centre county farmers; and is still from five to ten cents higher at our quotations. In addition to this, it is twenty to twenty-five cents higher than the Baltimore or Philadelphia market will afford; hence the inability of those who have no facilities to manufacture have to buy for shipment. To this difficulty we may add that freight from the Western shipping ports, are about the same as they are from Bellefonte to the cities above named.

Notices of the Press.

The ever increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. The character the Magazine possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has not led the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. THE SUN.

WEEKLY AND DAILY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential campaign gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall endeavor not only to keep it fully up to its old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and the articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this department of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

Cheese Factories—Maintaining the Fertility of our Farms.

The rapid increase of cheese factories in the country within the last few years, is a step in the right direction toward the restoration of the farms, to something near their original fertility and form of productiveness. For many years we have been impoverishing our best farming lands, by selling off hay to be consumed in the cities and by pursuing this course, robbing our fields annually of their fertility and productiveness. There is no class of property, which will depreciate faster in value, when subject to the skinning process, than agricultural lands. For instance—let a farmer lease a farm in good state of cultivation to another four or five years, and let the lessee sell off all the hay cut on the farm and its other productions without adding to the evil any fertilizing substance and the lessee, at the termination of his lease, will find his land depreciated very much in value. We know of many farms in the older portions of our State, that were once the pride of their owners for their productiveness, and on the income of which they were enabled to bring up large families of children, and furnish each with a handsome setting up when they became of age to manage their own affairs, which now, by being neglected and the production of the fields sold from the farm in the form of hay, oats &c., without replenishing their fertilizing properties, which have become little less than barren wastes, and will bring in the market only what the old buildings are worth to move or take down. By the establishment of cheese or butter factories, farmers instead of selling their hay, oats and vegetables, will have the whole consumed on their farms, and have sufficient manure to keep their fields and pastures from becoming worthless and wornout lands. To show our readers what they lose in fertilizing matter in every ton of hay they sell, to be taken off the farm, we give an extract from an article by Conrad Wilson, in a late number of the Country Gentleman.

"Without attempting at present to be very exact, it may be safely assumed that a ton of hay costs, on a general average, not much less than $10 dollars for the first crop after seeding, and probably about one-half that rate for the succeeding crops, making the final average from $7 to $8 per ton.

When hay is sold directly from the farm, it leaves no fertilizing element behind for the benefit of the soil. But when, by feeding, it is converted into other and more valuable products, the resulting manure has a specific value that belongs to the estimate of cost and profit of the hay crop. According to Dr. Dana, a ton of hay will yield a cord of solid manure. According to Prof. Johnson, a ton of hay is equivalent to 3,400 pounds of fresh manure, or 850 of the dry substance. According to a German agricultural calendar for 1874, a ton of hay contains 28½ pounds of nitrogen, 26 pounds of potash, 8 pounds of posphoric acid, 17 pounds of lime, 6½ pounds of magnesia, and 5 pounds of sulphuric acid. The theoretical value of the manure from a ton of hay is given at $6.43 for timothy, and $9.64 for clover. The money value of the nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash contained in a ton of clover according to Prof. Johnson, as cited by Joseph Harris, in the "Agriculturist," is equal to $17.57. Without stopping to analyze or to reconcile these various estimates, we may bring then to a very practical standard by taking the lowest of the above figures ($6.43) and reducing it about forty per cent. This will give us $4 as an average valuation of the manure from a ton of hay. Deducting this from the cost per ton ($7.50), we have $3.50 as the net cost of a ton of hay on a general average, when applied to feeding purposes. Of course every farmer can determine how far his own experience differs from this general average, and when he finds out how much mutton and wool there is in a ton of hay, how much butter, cheese, beef tallow and hide, he can soon tell whether his hay is a paying crop, and whether it is more profitable to sell it abroad and rob his land, or make a home market for it in his own stalls.

ENORMOUS ESTABLISHMENT,

BY MERITING and SECURING the Patronage of all classes of the Community to a degree never before enjoyed by ANY one House in any department of trade!!! Sure to commend itself and be commended

BY ALL THOUGHTFUL FOLK,

Because advantageous alike to both buyer and seller.

EXPLANATION AND ELABORATION

OF WANAMAKER & BROWN'S NEW PLAN.

1st POINT. "CASH."

Houses doing a credit business must provide for losses on bad debts, interest on long-standing accounts, capital locked up, etc. To bear such losses themselves would drive them out of business. Therefore a per cent. is added to the price of each article sold, to cover this leakage, and Cash Buyers whether they know it or not, really pay the bad debts and the interest on the long credits of the other customers!! Under the Cash Payment system one pays only for what he gets, and contributes nothing to a "Sinking Fund."

By this Radical Change we shall lose some of our customers no doubt, but we will gain ten where we lose one, the advantages being so great to all who can avail themselves of them. So we say

CASH THROUGHOUT.

Bring Money for Clothing, and we will supply it at prices possible under no other plan.

2d POINT. "ONE PRICE."

The fairness of this feature of our plan all will praise. It is simply treating all alike—exacting nothing from indisposition to bargain or ignorance, and, at the same time, conceding all that shrewdness on the shrewdest customer's part could possibly extort, because the "One Price" which we mark on our goods, shall invariably be

NOT the "First" Price, but the LAST and LOWEST PRICE.
NOT the "TOP" Price, but the VERY BOTTOM PRICE.

In other words, Salesmen or "Headmen," have never been allowed, under ordinary circumstances, to fall below a certain figure! It is at that, or at a lower figure that we now determine to mark our goods, calculating the cost to the exact penny, and fixing the price at the low minimum profit on which business on a large scale can be conducted.

We know that the larger business we aim for and anticipate, will require a large increase in the number of customers, and we shall therefore see to it that the "One Price" is based on the Smallest Profit, calculated to the exact and lowest penny, which will not be difficult to do with universal Cash Payment for the rule. The price will be marked in plain figures and no alteration allowed.

NOTE.—Whenever the exigencies of the season, the state of trade, or the money market may demand, the right is reserved to go through our stock before or after business hours and mark down any lot or lots of goods, changing the figures on all the labels, so that the new rates are the same to all, and all buy alike at the mark down prices.

WANAMAKER & BROWN WILL NEVER HOLD THEIR GOODS.

3d POINT. "Full Guarantee."

A printed Guarantee, bearing the signature of our firm, will accompany each garment as a Warrantee. This binds us in every sense, and will be honored as quickly as a good draft of the Government of the United States. This is a sample of the Full Guarantee, and tells its own story:

GUARANTEE.

We hereby guarantee
1st. That the prices of our goods shall be as low as the same quality of material and manufacture are sold anywhere in the United States.
2d. That the prices are precisely the same to everybody for same quality, on same day of purchase.
3d. That the quality of goods is as represented on printed labels.
4th. That the full amount of cash paid will be refunded, if customers find the articles unsatisfactory, and return them worn and uninjured within 10 days of date of purchase.

[Signed,] WANAMAKER & BROWN,
OAK HALL,
Sixth and Market Streets, Phila.

DATE,

4th POINT. "Cash Returned."

This is simply a concession on our part to our customers, to secure them full confidence in dealing for goods they know very little about, and we thus prevent any occasion for dissatisfaction from any and every cause whatsoever. If the garment is not exactly what you thought, if your taste changes, if the "home folks" prefer another color or another shape, if you find you can buy the same material and style elsewhere for less money, if you conclude you don't need it after you get home, if the season changes suddenly and you wish you had not bought it, bring it back unworn and uninjured, and the full amount of money you paid will be returned on the spot. What more can we do for our customers than this, when we make our clothing so that they can draw the money value with it equally as well as with a check on the bank?

THE ADVANTAGES

incident to a system having for its cardinal points these which we have now explained, are simply innumerable. Saving of time and temper, perfect security, absence of all huckstering, &c., &c., &c., &c. But above all this

Sinking the prices several degrees below what they have been heretofore, or could possibly be under the old system.

By dispensing with certain clerks no longer needed, it reduces "Store Expenses."
By enforcing CASH Payments, the bad debts are avoided.
By putting plenty of ready money in hand, it enables us to buy goods at figures that credit men know nothing about.
By increase of sales, a smaller profit on each article is sufficient.
All of these "By-Ways" lead direct to and this without lowering the quality or style of our Celebrated make of Men's and Boys' Clothing.

Our warehouses, comprising 27 spacious rooms, are stocked to the full our home mills have been turning out large quantities of goods to us that are now in store, and Foreign fabrics by the ship load, are now on our counters. Our workmen have been a small army, and as diligent and skillful as they are numerous. With the improvements already noted, there are also new styles, new colors, new cuts and more careful finishing. Everything possible has been done to meet and gratify the rush, and now

MEDICAL.

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

THE GREAT INDIAN DIURETIC.
INFINITELY SUPERIOR TO BUCHU.

Nine tenths of the human family suffer, directly or indirectly, at one time or other, from diseases or irregularities of the generative system, while the victims of indiscretion, and of quack treatment, are comparatively numerous.

The idea that patients cannot treat themselves successfully in these cases, has long ago been exploded. A good and reliable medicine, prepared by an experienced physician, from the original Indian Recipe, that is guaranteed to effect a can be as safely relied upon as the prescription of the most skillful practitioner. Such a medicine is the celebrated

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

Full directions accompany each bottle, and if they are carefully followed, a quick and permanent cure is guarranteed. Price $2.00 per bottle.

THE CHEROKEE INJECTION,

should always be used in conjunction with the Remedy for both incipient and obstinate cases of Gonorrhœa. Price $2.00 per bottle.

CHEROKEE CURE

for seminal weakness (spermatorrhœa), is a simple vegetable medicine that was used for many years in the practice of the physician who first gave the remedy to the public. It has effected cures that would scarcely be credited except on ocular evidence of the fact. Full directions, with pamphlet containing all particulars of symptoms, treatment, &c., accompany each bottle. Price $2.00 per bottle. Sold everywhere.

CHEROKEE PILLS.

These Pill are prepared expressly for the cure of those irregularities to which ladies are subject, and will be found safe, reliable and effectual, for the cure of Suppression, Green Sickness, Pain in the Back, Hysteria, Sick Headache, &c., &c. Price $1.00 per box.

Heimstreet's Hair Restorative,

OR INIMITABLE HAIR COLORING.

NOT A DYE.—Heimstreet's "Hair Coloring is not a Dye, and its operation is not by any chemical effect, but by a natural restoration of the glands, thus giving the hair the color it originally had.

NATURALNESS.—When the hair is dyed, its color is leaden hued and unnatural, but when restored by HEIMSTREET'S HAIR COLORING, its appearance is so perfectly natural that no one can detect the use of any Restorative

STAINLESS.—While the Restorative acts promptly on the hair, it leaves no stain or mark whatever on the skin. It is composed of ingredients that form a perfect dressing as well as a coloring, so that no oils, &c., are necessary.

THIS MOST EFFECTIVE of all the Hair Restorers is for sale by all druggists at 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. Numerous certificates from those who have used it are in the possession of the proprietors.

PARK'S BALSAM
OR WILD CHERRY AND TAR.

BALSAM.—Nothing is more soothing to the irritated membranes than the pure BALSAMS of which this medicine is composed.

WILD CHERRY.—The true bark of Wild Cherry is an unfailing specific for all throat and pectorial diseases.

TAR.—The wonderful healing properties of Tar when united with the other ingredients, render PARK'S BALSAM the most efficient Cough Medicine ever offered to the public.

CONSUMPTION.—The many cases of Consumption that have been cured justify us in the assertion that it is the very best medicine for that disease ever discovered.

CERTIFICATES OF CURES.

STEPHEN FISK, of New York, says his daughter had consumption, and terbucles had formed in her lungs. He was induced to try Park's Balsam, which effected a speedy cure.

T. EDWARD FLEET, of Brooklyn says, I think it is the best medicine for affections of the lungs I ever used.

G. S. FANCHER, of New York says, I feel fully persuaded that Park's Balsam has saved my life.

We have in our possession hundreds of certificates from others, and all of the same cheering import. Price 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere.

EGYPTIAN
Rat and Vermin Destroyer

FOR EXTERMINATING RATS, MICE, WATER BUGS, ROUCHES, RED ANTS, &c.

STRENGTH.—When a Rat tastes the Egyptian Destroyer, his death warrant is signed, sure. It cannot fail to kill. It also creates great thirst, and the rat will search for water out of doors, and not die in his hole, to cause a stench that cannot be got out.

ATTRACTIVENESS.—Rats are the shrewdest of vermin. It is hard to get them to eat poison. An ingredient in the Egyption Destroyer is a perfect bait, and they are attracted rather than freightened be it. "Rats (not children) cry for it.

KEEPING SOFT.—People know how the ordinary Rat Pastes dry up and become useless, causing annoyance and loss. The Egyptian Destroyer is fully warranted to keep soft, fresh and effective in any climate for years.

SURE DEATH.—The Egyptian Destroyer kills every time. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials are now in the hands of the proprietors, substantiating its great merits as the best preparation for destroying Vermin in the world. Be sure and ask for the "Egyptian," and take no other.

Put up in large glass bottles. Price, 25 cts. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief space afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

AT PRIVATE SALE.

A valuable farm containing 215 acres, situate within one mile of Milesburg, and three miles of Bellefonte, at the junction of the Bald Eagle Valley and Snow Shoe railroads, near the depot, Schools, Churches, Post office, Mills, etc. The lands are FREE from STONE, level, well fenced, and under a good state of cultivation. A valuable vein of is on the farm, and a village is growing up around it, which gives a fair prospect of an increase in value before long. The Philipsburg turnpike runs through it for a distance of ¼ of a mile rendering a large strip on each side available for house lots, from which the entire price of the farm might be realized, lots having sold heretofore for $100 apiece. The farm is well watered, having water in all the fields, good wells at the house and barn with pumps all in good order. There also are 50 acres of good

PINE AND OAK TIMBER.

The land has a southern exposure and is therefore very early. There are two houses on the farm, both facing the turnpike. One containing five rooms on the first floor with Hall and five on the second and back Kitchen, with room over-head. Connected with this house is a good log barn, ice house and other out buildings. On the other side of the road is the other house containing eight rooms with good barn and out buildings. This farm could be divided into two parts, and will be if purchasers so desire, making one containing 130 acres with the large house, and the other containing 36 acres with the small house. ELAINE

AS AN ILLUMINATOR.

WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.

ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

Bellefonte and County.

——Why is it that during the coldest season, nature takes off her duds?

——If you want this winter to seem short,—give your note payable in the spring.

——This winter no imported lecturers will devastate Bellefonte if she knows herself.

——Put down for Bellefonte—snow in abundance on Friday, Nov. 20th, the first of the season.

——Senator Wallace of Clearfield has been quite ill for the past two weeks but is slowly recovering.

——Court will begin on Monday next, and is announced to continue for two weeks—but they lie so much about this that we do not know whether it will or not.—Watchman.

Courts don't lie, Mr. Fury; they sit.

——Captain Breeze, of the U. S. Navy, has been spending a few weeks in town with his father in-law—Governor Curtin.

——Now eat buckwheat cakes, chestnuts, walnuts and hickory nuts, and rejoice in a flourishing crop of pimples and boils.

——Thanksgiving day will be appropriately celebrated at Beech Creek tomorrow. A grand shooting match will take place.

——The town council has been deciding that no member of that body shall be allowed to accept any municipal contracts.

——Foote, of the Berichter is a fine, whole-souled fellow since he stuck so bravely to the straight out ticket and had his boots mended.

——Sunday was cold but rather pleasant; churches were well attended; the newest bonnets are a fac-simile, in velvet, of a dish-pan with a brim.

——Another dog tried to wrench off a wheel from a steam engine at the depot on Saturday morning, but when the contest ended, the canine was strung along two rods of the track.

——If that young man who has been whining about town for the last week had kept his mouth shut no one would have known he was the fellow who got into trouble with the girl at Aaronsburg.

——Hon. Alfred Armstrong, while visiting Bellefonte was the guest of James H. Rankin, Esq., one of his old pupils. Mr. Armstrong is at present employed in the Bond room of the U. S. post office at Washington.

——Mr. John Spangler of Centre Hall, has followed the example of Charlotte Cushman, the actress. He has bidden farewell to the stage, having sold the Centre Hall and Laurelton route and equipments to Mr. George Miller.

——D. W. Woodring & Co., still maintain their reputation for furnishing the purest and best supply of groceries in town. TheEx-Sheriff is an accommodating and thorough going business man and deserves to be well patronized. The store is on Allegheny Street near Bishop.

——Mr. Orris L. Hoover and his bride returned from their wedding tour on Friday evening last and proceeded immediately to their handsome residence on Spring Street where an inviting supper awaited them. Mr. Hoover, has again assumed charge of the express business, and has entered gracefully upon the responsibilities and pleasures of a married man.

——The borough authorities have finally passed a sledge hammer ordinance, directing the hogs to stay inside of private enclosures, or their owners will suffer from fines. This action seems to satisfy the public demands but Councilman Duncan has vowed a solemn vow never to get married until the cows of Bellefonte are forbidden the right of pasturage on our thoroughfares.

——Major P. B. Wilson, Hon. S. T. Shugert, C. Curtin, Esq., and Mr. Frank P. Green left yesterday for New Orleans, to attend the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar. They expect to reach their destination on Monday next and after attending the Templar reunion and spending a few days in the Crescent city they will return via Alabama, Georgia, Florida and thence homeward all along the shore.

Bank Robbery.—The attempt to rob the Curwensville bank is thus spoken of by the Clearfield Journal:

An attempt was made on Monday night last, to rob the First National Bank, of Curwensville, which would in all probability have been successful, had the scoundrels not used too much powder. They drilled two holes in the sides of the safe and charged them with powder, but the charge was so heavy that it blew one of the large plate-glass windows of the bank into pieces and made a fearful report, which awakened the Cashier, Mr. Arnold, who lives opposite, and when that gentleman put in an appearance the burglars fled—of course having secured nothing for their trouble. The damage to the bank—which is just new—is considerable.

A few days previous two men visited the several banks in this place, with the ostensible object of negotiating some drafts. One of the parties also made a deposit in the Clearfield County Bank, and requested the Cashier to give him a check on the First National Bank of Curwensville. The Cashier of the Curwensville Bank just coming in at the time, the check was not given, but arrangements were made that the depositor should draw his individual check on that bank for the amount of the deposit at his pleasure. These facts would indicate that these men were the same parties who, on Monday night, blew open the Curwensville Bank safe. It is to be hoped that they may be arrested and punished as such scoundrels deserve.

Sudden Death.—Mr. George Rhoads, father of our well known painter, Mr. Thomas Rhoads, died very suddenly at his residence, near Boiling Springs, on Saturday night 14th inst. He was well as usual on Saturday and was busy working about the house all day. In the evening he was apparently feeling better and in better spirits than he had been for weeks before. About four o'clock in the morning Mrs. Rhoads heard him make some unusual noise and afterwards draw a long sigh. She immediately procured a light, but on her return his spirit had departed. Mr. Rhoads was 76 years and seven days old, and had lived a life of unusual activity, and, for forty one years, was an active member of the Methodist church. His death will be deeply lamented by all who knew him. The funeral took place on Monday.

——We would call particular attention to the fact that it is an item of much real interest to the people of this town or county as to the prices of teas, coffees and all kinds of groceries. They cost money at all times but during these hard times it is actually burdensome to pay the current prices for them, when money and labor are so scare. We are sure our readers would feel thankful to us if we could put them upon any plan by which they could save money in buying groceries. To all such inquirers we would say that they can save a large percentage by buying their stock of groceries of Sechler & Co. in the Bush House block. They have the largest and most complete stock in the county and their enormous trade enables them to sell at prices below all opposition. For proof of these statements we invite an inspection of their establishment.

——We have noticed in these columns several times, the fact that a fish society has been organized for the purpose of stocking the streams with fish as well as for the protection of the native trout in the several streams of Centre County. Messrs. Valentines & Co. received some time ago of Seth Green, Mumford, N.Y., five thousand trout eggs and five thousand white fish eggs, which were successfully hatched in the house connected with their trout pond. The salmon trout were put into the rolling mill dam and so far as they can be observed are doing well. The white fish were so small when hatched that they passed through the screens into the pond below and were eaten by the native trout.

——We are in receipt of an invitation to attend the Wooden Wedding of Captain W. C. Kress and lady of Lock Haven, this evening. We cannot be present in the flesh but we certainly will be in a spiritual sense. The gallant Captain and his accomplished lady will have many admirers and friends besides us to assist them in their sylvan nuptails, but we hope to be present at the celebration of their Diamond Wedding.

——When the Bellefonte ladies, returning from the Post Office, wish to see if their hair is in good order and their bonnets on straight, they quickly walk into Welch's book-store and pretend to be examining the elegant display of holiday goods, and thus get a sly glance into a mirror. They all agree however, that Welch has the handsomest stock of goods ever brought to town.

—General Butler said, the other day, there were two supremely happy woman in Essex County—Mrs. Butler, who rejoiced that her husband was to be kept out of Washington; and Mrs. Thompson, who was delighted that her husband was going to Washington!

——Lawyer Peale and Prothonotary Brown of Clinton County and Col. L. G. Huling of Williamsport were attending court on Monday.

——In the Seven Mountains, near Stone Creek Gap, last week C. R. Womer and party killed six deer. Womer is a Boalsburger.

——In the upper tendom kitchens of Bellefonte, they make buckwheat cakes by mixing the flour with Saratoga water. It is a panacea for the buckwheat itch.

——The Pittsburg Commercial remarks: "Hopefulness is always a source of power." That's very fine; send some of it down to this neighborhood.

——Col. J. I. Gregg, of the U. S. Army, son of the late Hon. Andrew Gregg, of this county, has been spending a few days at the old homestead in Boggs twp.

——In the Bear Meadows, Dr. Fisher of Boalsburg, has caught, in his "pen" three bears, during the present month. A fourth one was caught in the pen but ate his way out.

——Thanksgiving to-morrow. A bushel of potatoes, a load of coal, or a Numidian fowl, presented to your widowed neighbor will give additional zest to your own Thanksgiving.

——The students occasionally make excurisons to the neighboring mountains in quest of deer and other game. They have been supplying the college with venison quite liberally.

——The Centre Hall Reporter says the stage route from Centre Hall to Laurelton has been sold to George Miller. George Miller has not succeeded very well in constructing a railroad line through Pennsvalley but he may make a success of the stage coach business.

——The firm of Shortlidge & Co. is still maintaining its reputation for furnishing the best qualities of coal and lime at the closest possible figures. They also buy and sell all kinds of grain. Farmers will do well to call on them and consult as to prices before selling their crops.

——We shall have to apologize to our subscribers at Zion, Hublersburg and Nittany for the carelessness of our "devil" last week who sent those packages to Snow Shoe instead of sending them to their proper destination. We shall endeavor not to have the same blunder happen again.

——We are requested to call the attention of the police to the fact that the fence surrounding the cemetery, has been badly disabled by ill disposed parties. Cattle have found their way into the enclosure and considerable damage has been done to shrubbery and other ornaments. The guilty parties deserve the severest punishment.

——Dr. A. C. Jackson, of Anglica, N. Y., who has had immense success in the treatment of consumption and other pulmonary diseases, will be at Garman's Hotel, this place, on Wednesday, Nov. 25th, to remain several days, where all who need his counsel and medical treatment can call on him. He will also visit Philipsburg on Wednesday, Dec. 3nd, at the Lloyd House.

——A number of our exchanges seem to think that some of the important local events lately recorded in these columns are works of fiction. Would they please understand that this is a remarkable community and occurances recorded are of the most remarkable people who have tired of running with the common herd. They must be placed properly on record and our journalistic duty is plain.

——There are nearly three hundred coal mines in this State, whose annual production is over 5,500,000 tons, though it will fall far short of that amount this year, every mine suffering from the panic. Only two-thirds of the mines are working at present, and they do not average three days a week. There are about 22,000 men and boys employed in the mines and 4,800 above ground, says an item that is going the rounds.

——We had the pleasure of meeting Mr. John Ligget of Beech Creek on Monday. Our readers remember that last August, Mr. L. accidentally shot himself in the leg while hunting in the mountains back of Beech Creek. Since then he has been unable to attend to any business, until within a week or two past, and he is still somewhat lame, although his physicians say that he will after a while, get full use of the injured member. We are glad to see him restored to health as the community can ill afford to lose so valuable a man.

——The Altoona Tribune of last Thursday, in an article under the head of "Distressing Accident," gave rise to a story that Mr. Aaron Hall, of Union twp., had accidentally shot William Lucas of Unionville, while out hunting on Moshannon hill. The writer says that Mr. Hall mistook Lucas for a bear running through the laurels, and fired at him, but on coming up to where he lay found how terribly he had been mistaken. The writer then adds, "the reader in his imagination can comprehend the rest as well as we can." Just so; but the imagination of the Tribune man is apparently hard to get up to. Mr. Hall did not mistake Mr. Lucas for a bear; he did not shoot at Mr. Lucas; and the whole story is a fabrication out of whole cloth.

Burglars.—On Saturday evening about ten o'clock a young lawyer of this place observed a tall, bearded, suspicious looking man climbing over the garden fence and making his way cautiously to the rear entrance of a house on Spring street. Suspicion was aroused at once and the movements of the individual were watched. He made his way to the kitchen window, peered cautiously through, disappeared in the darkness and soon afterwards was seen crawling along to the kitchen door. The gentleman who observed these actions, immediately made a detour and came quietly around to the front entrance and found the family sitting in the parlor. The burglarious movements of the tall, bearded man were recounted. In a moment all was excitement and confusion. The men armed themselves with revolvers and clubs; a servant was dispatched for the nearest neighbors and, when the anxious party had been swelled to eight men, armed to the teeth, they made ready to capture the enemy. Two of the posse remained in the house and the balance divided into two gangs and surrounded the house. They met at the rear of the building and reported that neither party had seen anybody After an unsuccessful search throughout houses, one the number observed a faint light through the closed shutters of the kitchen window. Two men stood guard here while the rest resolved to enter the door. It was locked, but, in an instant, they burst it open and rushed in. Here they found the tall, bearded man sitting on a chair near the stove and—the servant girl sitting on his lap. He was her beau. He now walks lame and has no more confidence in the boasted liberties of American citizenship.

The State Geological Survey.—It appears that Professor Leslie and his corps of assistants have determined to push the geological survey of the state to rapid completion. He has districted the state and placed an assistant with several aids in each district and, for the last four months, the field work has been pushed rapidly forward.

The bituminous coal measures of Centre, Clearfield and Jefferson counties have been studied by Mr. Franklin Platt, assistant, who has made his head quarters at Osceola. His corps of assistants consist of Mr. Richard Sanders, aid, and Messrs. H. J. Fagan and Charles A. Young, volunteer aids. These gentlemen have made their head quarters in Bellefonte for the last month, and during that time have made a most searching examination of the geological structure of the county. Messrs. Fagan and Young are at present engaged in collecting specimens which are sent to Mr. Andrew S. McCreath, chemical assistant, Harrisburg, for analysis and distribution. Considerable time has been spent in a special study of the Gap at Linn & McCoy's with a view of solving some important problems of structure.

——Peter Aschroft, a miner in the Cuba Collieries of Perks & Parker, made a remarkable escape on Monday night. He was working on a night shift and had put a blast into the face of the coal under which he had borne, but without any perceptible effect. He then began bearing under further preparatory to putting in a second blast laying down upon the bottom, partially under the coal, when without warning the mass of coal, weighing several tons, fell, and must inevitably have crushed him had it not miraculously parted in the middle and fallen upon each side of him. As it was he escaped with a badly crushed hand.—Journal.

Accident.—Mr. Wm. Wolf and lady while on their way home from Milroy, on last Thursday night, met with an accident which might have proven much more serious than it did. The horse, hitched in a carriage, in turning from the upper to the lower part of the pike, between Centre Hill and Judge Hosterman's, came too near the bank, causing the carriage to upset, and the horse started off, dragging them a short distance, when the single tree broke, and he left the vehicle behind. Mrs. Wolf sustained some severe cuts and bruises. Had the horse not become free from the carriage as soon as he did, the result no doubt would have been very serious.—Reporter.

——On Monday afternoon we noticed that both Judges Mayer & Orvis were on the bench with Associated Dopp occupying the third chair and Judge Love sitting in the rear on the floor. An humble place for the seat of Justice!

——The Philipsburgh Journal of Saturday contains an article on the new saw and plaining mills of Messrs Hoover, Harris & Co., of which firm Messrs E. C. Humes & John P. Harris of this place are members.

—The politician's good nature, everywhere exhibited since the late elections, can be accounted for in a great measure on the ground that when one is wet clear through, he does not care a cent how hard it rains.

——Now is the proper season of the year to get up donations for your minister and carry him a few pounds of dried apples, a bushel of potatoes and three yards of cotton and damage his house to the extent of fifty dollars says an exchange.

——Ex Sheriff D. Z. Kline was appointed foreman of the Grand Jury on Monday—a merited compliment to his fitness and ability.

——We have taken a small amount of stock in the Greeley Statue, to be erected by the printers of America, and we'd like to make a like subscription for his successor.

Dyspepsia.—Dyspepsia is the most discouraging and distressing desease man is heir too. Americans are particularly subject to this desease and its effects; such as sour stomach, sick headache, habitual costiveness, heartburn, water-brash, gnawing and burning pains in the pit of the stomach, coming up of the food, coated tongue, disagreeable taste in the mouth, impure blood and all diseases of the Stomach and Liver. Two doses of Green's August Flower will relieve you at once, and there positively is not a case in the United States it will not cure. If you doubt this go to your druggist, F Potts Greer, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it. Regular size 75 cents. 6-44-eow-1y

John Norris Patton.—The Cairo, Ill., Bulletin, of the 23rd, ult., thus notices the death of J. N. Patton, Esq.:

Mr. Patton, the subject of this sketch, was born at Freedom Forge, Mifflin Co., Pa., on the 12th day of December, 1833. He was of Irish descent, his grandfather coming to this country, from Sligo, Ireland—settling in Philadelphia During the revolutionary war, this ancestor of the deceased served with honor, as Brigadier General, equipping, at his own expense, the first volunteer regiment from Philadelphia.

The father of the deceased, was an iron master in Pennsylvania, of large and extended reputation. He was accidently killed at Winchester, Virginia.

Mr. Patton has been long and favorably known to the greater part of our citizens, having settled in Cairo in the year 1854, since which time till his death he was intimately identified with our city's welfare and interest. During his lifetime Mr. Patton had various positions of trust and responsibility in our midst, in all of which he acquitted himself with honor and uprightness. He was employed as Deputy Surveyor of the port under Col. John S. Hacker. Also as clerk in the Postoffice with Bryan Shaunnessy as Postmaster; was for some years a member of the firm of Dan Able & Co., and at the time of his death and for several years previous, was connected with the well-known house of G. D. Williams & Co.

In all the relations of life, John N. Patton was a generous, kind-hearted gentleman, sincere in his friendships, upright in his dealings will all men, possessed with tact, honesty, shrewdness, and withal bearing the burden of ill health with patience and cheerfulness most exemplary.

He was also a sincere christian, and departed this life surrounded by the loving care and attention of a devoted wife and affectionate and kind friends, in the full hope of a life, where

"Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more."

His wife and sisters have, in this trying moment, the sympathies of a large circle of friends and acquaintances, by whom his loss is regretted and his death is deeply mourned.

——On Sunday evening last the Centre County Bible Society held a public meeting in the Lutheran Church of Bellefonte to which all the different churches were invited and to which they generally responded by filling up the church so as to necessitate extra seats. After the usual opening by Rev. R. Crittenden the large audience joined in singing the familiar Hymn "Come Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove" Rev. M. L. Smyser of the M. E. Church read a portion of scripture and lead in prayer. "All Hail the power of Jesus' name" was then sung. Rev. Jas. Calder, D. D., President of the society, after announcing the object of the meeting introduced Rev. H. C. Galbraith, the agent of the society who gave a very interesting account of his labor in Potter township and part of Gregg and Harris having visited in all about sixty seven families, out of which number be found but three families entirely destitute of the Bible, all of whom he supplied with a copy of the Bible. He related various incidents occuring during his tramp showing the necessity of the work and commending it favorably to the public. Altogether it was a very satisfactory report impressing the society with the importance of the work and a determination to push the work more vigorously, being satisfied that their agent, H. C. Galbraith, was doing his work faithfully and successfully. Rev. W. T. Wylie of the Presbyterian church spoke briefly and in his usual earnest and interesting style, showing the peculiar way and manner of the spread of the Gospel in to the Japanese Empire—closingby reading the usual Missionary Hymn which was responded to by the audience by rising and singing the same.

Rev. M. L. Smyser then spoke in a very feeling and convincing manner in favor of prosecuting the spread of the gospel through the Bible Society, urging that if one soul were redeemed and saved through its influence, it would well repay all the money and labor expended, after whom, Dr. Calder briefly explained the plan prepared by the Society to canvass the Borough of Bellefonte to solicit subscription for the Society, as follows, viz: The Borough to be divided into nine districts, and each district to be canvassed by two ladies, to be selected from the different churches in the Borough, while Rev. H. C. Galbraith is to continue his work in other parts of the county. Meeting then closed by singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The following are the names of the persons selected as executive committee from the different denominations.

——Somebody has been scraping the frost off our friend Retlaw's window pane and here is what he says about it:

Snydertown, Nov. 20, 1874.

Mr. Editor,—Perhaps a few remarks upon the great fault to Snydertown may do a mite of good to some other like neighborhood. Slander is a mild name for the bickering and back-biting practiced in this neighborhood. Everyone, it seems, must know their neighbors' business, and if they have any of their own it is neglected as a matter of course; consequently Snydertown has stood for years all on one side of the street, and no prospect of growing either, and all because, as I hold it, each one tries to see how much frost he can clean from his neighbor's window pane, not heeding the pile of snow accumulating at his own door. Let no man boast of a thorough independence of thought and action or an utter indifference to the opinions of others until he has lived in Snydertown for some time. If he can stand the fire there he can well afford to boast. Of course the few Republicans, or black-legs as they are called, must "walk chalk" as the saying is, but it can easily be seen by the pompous air and strut which the Democratic cocks put on, that they are entirely unused to such a thing. I should not wonder if they all come out in new suits of feathers. Respectfully,

E. M. Retlaw.

——The venerable and estimable wife of Mr. William Brown, on Allegheny street, died on Tuesday night last. Mrs. Brown had been in bad health for a long time, and death to her was only a welcome release from the sufferings of earth. Next Sunday, had she lived, would have been the 40th anniversary of her marriage to Mr. Brown, but the Destroyer waited not. Mrs. Brown was a benevolent-looking, mild-faced woman, who was greatly beloved and esteemed by her immediate family, and by her friends and neighbors. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved and afflicted famil. The remains were deposited in the Catholic cemetery, and were followed to the grave by a large concourse of people. Peace to her ashes.—Watchman.

——We had the pleasure of a call from Mr. Geo. H. Zeigler, of Philipsburgh, on Monday. Mr. Z. is one of the staunchest Republicans and most enterprising business men of the above town, and will yet live, we hope, to receive honorable recognition of his worth as a citizen and his services to his party.

——"I move you Mr. Speaker" would have been the speech of J. Cathartic Ayer, if he had got into Congress.—Pittsburg Gazette

As Dr. Ayer did not get into Congress, we suppose the speaker must remain costive.

Business Notices.

Many valuable horses die from the effects of colic. The best thing to do in a case of this kind is to pour a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment into a long-necked bottle, add half a pint of molasses and water, then pour the whole down the horse's throat. In ten minutes the horse will begin to eat.

Parsons' Purgative Pills will greatly relieve, if not entirely cure, dyspepsia, when everything else fails. They have been tried in some desperate cases, and have given more relief than any other medicine.

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills, constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superceded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or Mutum in Parvo Physic. Modern Chemical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principals, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, scarcely larger than mustard seed, renders each little Pellet as active an powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

Dr. Ira A. Thayer, of Baconsburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medicines."

Lyon & Macomber, druggists, Vermillion, D. T., say: "We think they are going to sell like hot cakes as soon as people get acquainted with them, and will spoil the pill trade, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, for the Cure of Consumption Coughs, and Colds.

The great virtue of this medicine is that it ripens the matter and throws it out of the system, purifies the blood, and thus affects a cure.
